Acceptance (Let go and let God)

Two years after the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, members of Congress approved the 25th Amendment. Ratified in 1967, this law lays out a process for the continuation of leadership if the President cannot carry out their duties because of death, resignation, or "inability."

These clarifications were deemed necessary since Article II, Section 1, Clause 6 of the Constitution, does not offer a straightforward process for the transfer of power in such cases.

Nine times in history, this process transferred power to the sitting Vice President.

Once due to resignation and eight times as a result of death.

Nine times in history, this process transferred power to the sitting Vice President. Once due to resignation and eight times as a result of death.

The other time that the power of the presidency transfers is after an election where the incumbent is replaced by a newly elected leader. This transfer of power has happened 44 times, according to my count. Each transition comes with its own nuances, anticipation, surprises, and anxiety. Threats made by our current President is increasing an already tense situation.

Meanwhile, our country faces other challenges where our attention should be focused on. Cases of the coronavirus are increasing again, just as the medical experts warned. And this failure by our leaders is taking away from two other, more complex challenges, racial injustice, and global climate change.

Peace (Finding peace in an anxious world)

Adolf Hitler rose to power in 1932, setting himself up to become a dictator the following year. That same year, WWI veterans demonstrating in Washington DC and demanding bonus money promised for serving in the war were forcefully removed by the U.S. military. This took place at the direction of then-President Hoover. Later that same year, Democratic Governor of New York Franklin D. Roosevelt defeated Hoover in a landslide victory.

Anxiety is the number one diagnosed mental illness on the planet. According to the Anxiety and Depression Association of America, Anxiety disorders are the most common mental illness in the U.S., affecting 40 million adults age 18 and older. Anxiety disorders are highly treatable, yet only around a third of those suffering from acute anxiety receive treatment.

I suspect that many of us turn to prayer when we feel fearful, feel fragile, and anticipate that things may worsen. As a pastor, I frequently pray with others. And I prefer to have someone who isn't "trained in prayer" to do the praying. But one of the most common concerns I hear is, "I don't know what to pray." I have a suggestion that might fit when this happens to you.

The Serenity Prayer grew out of time, such as we are in now. A time of great uncertainty and high anxiety. A young and outspoken pastor and professor of theology, Reinhold Niebuhr, wrote down four brief, but powerful thoughts that eventually was named the Serenity Prayer by the organizers of the 12-Step program.

Although the prayer was altered slightly from its original version, it has withstood the test of time, helping millions of people cope during times of relentless anxiety. The idea behind the pastor's prayer is straightforward. Lord, give us the courage to change what must be altered, the serenity to accept what cannot be helped, and the insight to know the one from the other.

Peace, courage, satisfaction, and wisdom are gifts worth requesting. Who doesn't want to find serenity in life? Who needs more courage? We all want satisfaction. Who couldn't use more wisdom? These promises sound like they are beyond our abilities. And they are when we pursue them on our own. The library shelves are full of self-help books that may take us part of the way. But the serenity prayer recognizes that only God can deliver on these gifts.

Our lives have been interrupted by several forces that originated out of the complexity of humans living together. None of these forces suddenly showed up without warning. They do not depend on one another for their destructive powers, yet they seem to collude together to multiply their impact on us.

The force that appears in every news program daily is the coronavirus. This disease has played a role in the premature deaths of over one million people. Twenty percent of these deaths took place in the United States. Yet we represent only 4 percent of the world's population. We currently have 25% of the known coronavirus cases in the world. Our country's dismal response to the threat of the virus is assisted by a second destructive force.

Our country was founded on the idea that people can find a way to govern ourselves if everyone is given a voice and vote. This ideal is labeled democracy, although, in actuality, this ideal has yet to be realized. Democracy offers hope that disagreements can be handled through civil debate and fair elections. And that differences are forged into compromises that strengthen our nation through cooperation.

This fragile bond is under attack by a force that threatens to rip us apart. Our inability to care enough about each other to eradicate the coronavirus adds to our vulnerability. And this vulnerability is exploited by both internal and foreign enemies hoping to undermine our democratic processes.

A third destructive force seems woven within the very fabric of our nation. Founded by visions of imperialism that forced indigenous people off of the lands where they lived, our nation's history is mired in self-centeredness disguised as ideology. Choosing to enslave others to do the heavy lifting of building a nation was a short distance away. Try as we did to pull at the threads of oppression and exploitation, our country's fabric is still corrupted with a focus on me rather than us. As a result, the winds of racism continue to blow the debris of destruction across our cities and towns.

is paying attention and always present. Gratitude leads to reverence, which leads to peace.

Gratitude leads to reverence which leads to peace...

A lot of stress comes from situations where we want change but feel helpless to do anything. Learning that we are not in control is a difficult lesson that most of us learn repeatedly. For a worrisome medical diagnosis or losing someone close to us, denial is only a temporary fix. Eventually, we learn to accept the reality of our situation. And hope for peace.

Acceptance (Let go and let God)

I'm noticing that my anxiety is increasing despite thinking I had already maxed out.

"Take a deep breath and slowly release. Breathe in and breathe out slowly. Notice the calming effect as you focus on breathing." These are instructions repeated numerous times each day by persons across the county. Self-coaching is one coping strategy for releasing some of the tension created by anxiety and worry. Focus on the simple yet fascinating process of breathing and feel the tension ease.

Last week, I asked listeners and readers to start a habit of praying five times each day. For some, this may add to the stress, with one more thing to keep track of—morning, night, and before each meal. Begin with a simple thank you and see where it takes you. It's really that simple.

A more advanced idea when searching for peace is to end the day reflecting on where you noticed God at work. Someone helping another person. A beautiful sunset. Kind words. These are all signs that God

Asbury Worship Series Serenity

During September, we focused on invitations for how to address our anxiety using suggestions from Psychologists, supported by illustrations from scripture. In October, we turn our attention to the ancient wisdom offered in the Book of Proverbs and put into practice in a popular prayer.

Our series is guided by a recent book that comes to us from the Urban Village Church in Chicago, published with the support of the United Methodist Women. The title of the book is, Finding Peace in an Anxious World.

Book Club News

We finish our discussions of Bridges Out of Poverty this week. If you haven't read this book you may want to consider reading it at some point. The authors compare and contrast the hidden rules and attitudes of three economic classes: poverty, middle-class, and wealthy. But the focus is on understanding how persons facing economic poverty survive despite a lack of support systems.

Our next book is titled, Finding Peace in an Anxious World. Our study of this book coincides with our October worship series. This book was written by staff of the Urban Village Church in Chicago. It uses the book of Proverbs and

"The Serenity Prayer" as a guide to help us find our way through anxiety, worry, and fear and move towards God's peace. A peace that surpasses all understanding.

The Serenity Prayer" shaped a 2015 four-part sermon series at the Urban Village Church. The series helped the church deal with the tumultuous events of that summer. The book offers a framework for how to approach a God who desires peace for the hearts of God's people in times of anxiety.

Using "The Serenity Prayer" as a scaffold, this book explores ways for us to discover peace through scriptural and spiritual disciplines. The book has only four chapters, each written by a different Urban Village Church leader. Each chapter focuses on different aspects of the prayer—serenity, acceptance, courage, and wisdom—and each concludes with a spiritual practice.

We begin our discussions on September 30. Be sure to reserve a copy now. The cost is $10 but don't let cost deter your participation. We will make sure each person gets a book that wants a copy.

A few of us meet in person each Wednesday in the upstairs library for lunch and conversation. Check with Pastor Tommy if you plan to attend in person so we can assure social distancing. We're also online for those who cannot meet in person, are not ready to meet in person, or who do not want to wear a face mask.

Unfortunately, the virus is still a threat and in-person gatherings quickly become super-spreaders if precautions are ignored. Bring your own lunch or coordinate with others to purchase carry-out. Potlucks are suspended for now.

I encourage you to join us either in person or online for our Wednesday gatherings. You can call in by phone, be heard, and hear what others are saying by calling (929) 436-2866, and entering the meeting ID, 482458815#.

We are a diverse group and we are delighted when new persons join us. I hope that you will join in on our discussion.

You can contact our office with questions, by phone or simply type your question on our website's homepage — FlintAsbury.org.

Serenity

Each week we plan to dig deeper into each line of the Serenity Prayer, using the Book of Proverbs as a repository of wisdom. I pray that you will join us either in person or online.

We call our new series Serenity. This topic is a response to the growing list of persons struggling to hold-on to faith in an anxious world. The pandemic continues to wreak havoc with our plans to return to some version of normalcy. Some families welcome this opportunity for in-person school, while others choose to decline. The invitation and the RSVP are complicated.

I'm usually hesitant to comment on politics since I am infatuated with diversity. A world where we all agree would be dull and less creative than a world of varying opinions. Needless, there comes a time when the church is called to take a stand against oppression, intolerance and stupidity.

The number of persons dying from the coronavirus as a result of failed leadership is inexcusable. The constant barrage of executive orders dismantling the policies that attempt to offer equality for all persons and protect our earth is an affront to the values we hold sacred in our faith traditions.

October is likely to prove to be an even more anxious month than the present. We can anticipate our airwaves filled with images and hurtful messages coming from a group of people anxious to hold on to power at any cost, and weaponized by foreign enemies of our nation. I pray that this series and our weekly life group study of this book will indeed, help us to find peace in an anxious world.

I pray that you will join us each Sunday morning at 10:30 am. We plan to be live via webinar, through Facebook live, or you can call (929) 436-2866 and enter the meeting number — 324 841 204. Acceptance (Let go and let God) ...cont from page 2

Brittany Issac, writing on the topic of acceptance, offers this modified version of the serenity prayer. “Lord, grant me the serenity to change the things I cannot accept.”¹ As I read her chapter, I found myself in complete agreement. “Preach Sister,” I thought in support of her insight. Is this not what leadership is all about? We see a situation that we can’t accept, and we lead others toward change?

Years ago, I discovered what it was like to experience burnout. After choosing to accept a position, opening a new office in Detroit for a computer software company, I put all of my energy, education, and body into succeeding. And I succeeded. At least for a few years until I hit the wall. The intensity took everything I could offer and more. It took some advice from an intern under my supervision years later to discover a balance I needed to avoid this happening again. Business is a marathon, not a sprint.

In high school track, I was a sprinter. I loved to run as fast as possible but discovered that my body could handle only a couple hundred yards before I was spent. My coach pushed me to consider longer distances, noting that my exceptionally long stride was a detriment at the beginning of a sprint, but an asset in longer distances. I did not want to hear it. I enjoyed the thrill of a sprint even though I realized that the longer the race, the better my chances of winning.

Accepting the possibility of failure is hard for me. I suspect failure is hard for most of us. Accepting that we cannot do that, which captures our imagination and motivation, feels like a whole new level of failure. Team sports are great at teaching another life lesson. We are stronger together. But as soon as I become we, accepting that which we cannot change stares us squarely in the face. And then I met Jesus Christ. Our relationship has been rocky at times. Jesus is in it for the long haul. A marathon that never ends. A pace that never leaves another person behind. An understanding of Sabbath that offers periodic rest and recuperate. And most of all, an acceptance that blows my mind.

There was this time that Jesus was facing the ultimate test. He knew what was coming. Jesus was a prayer extraordinaire who wrote the Book on praying without ceasing. And we read in the Gospel of Matthew how Jesus prayed the night that the authorities were on their way to arrest Him. He asked God to find another way if possible.

This famous prayer, said by Jesus, ended with the most excruciating conclusion imaginable, at least for Jesus. “Your will, God, not mine.” Jesus accepted that which God had in mind for Him. Twenty-four hours of agony, followed by death.

But His death was followed by resurrection. Jesus trusted God. And yes, it was easier for Jesus since He and God are One. But don’t let this detail spoil the main point. Jesus accepted that which He wanted to change but knew that He did not need to change because God was in complete control. Jesus could find peace amid intense anxiety because He trusted in God.

This is true for you and me as well. We can find peace by trusting in God. We can find peace in accepting that which we cannot change. God may make the change we hoped for or not. If not, stay tuned. God had something better in mind that we simply could not see coming. Resurrection comes in God’s perfect timing.

Yet not what I want, but what you want.

Matthew 26:39

This chapter ends with a spiritual practice to add to our collection of coping skills. I suspect that the steps share a commonality with other techniques taught by therapists and spiritual leaders. The practice involves naming the feelings that are causing us to be anxious. This takes some effort. Settle into an awareness of whatever is happening to your body without judgment.

The second step may seem out there a bit if you are new to this sort of practice. Welcome, whatever is causing your anxiety. If you are afraid, welcome the fear that is trying to overtake you. If you are feeling pain, accept the pain. Welcome whatever is causing you distress.

Then comes the clincher. Let go. Release yourself of the need to control whatever may be the source of whatever your feeling that has you tied up in knots. Brittany Issac offers this suggestion, “I let go of the desire to change what I am experiencing.” More simply, let go and let God.

Life is a struggle for most of us. And these are anxious times. White supremacist militia groups living in our state plotting to execute our Governor, friends, and family dying from a deadly virus, racial injustice, a changing climate bringing intense weather patterns, and more.

The message appearing on a painting by a Central Michigan College student in front of our church building challenges us all with “Together we can change the world.” And we can. But along the way, there will be some things we have to turn over to God so we can focus on what God wants us to do.

Figuring out the difference comes at the end of the serenity prayer. First, let’s focus on the change we can make. Stay tuned for next week’s message, Courage.

We have been very busy around here lately and we'd love to share some good news about what has been going on at the South Flint Soup Kitchen.....

We officially opened August 20th and rebranded our clothing pantry into the beautiful "Angel Closet", after identifying some key issues with our old way of doing things. We previously had our closet go by the name of the "clothing pantry" and realized that wasn't that exciting! We also identified some key issues with our clothing pantry, such as items being placed in cardboard boxes on the floor, items being placed on the floor that weren't up to standard and more.

We worked closely with our new clothing pantry head, and now Angel Closet Coordinator, Michelle Maylum, to figure out a way where clients could not only have access to quality, like new clothing and household items, but also be able to have the experience of shopping with dignity.

Michelle and the Senior Program Manager, Katelin Maylum, came up with a vision for The Angel

Closet: "We believe that everyone has a right to shop with dignity and have access to quality clothing regardless of their circumstances in life." From there, they worked on making that vision a reality.

Now barely two months into this new venture, we have several new rolling clothing racks so clients can pick items from a rack, not a cardboard box on the floor, and items are organized and labeled appropriately to make shopping easier for clients. We also have "associates" on the floor willing to help clients with a smile, not looming over them trying to prevent them from taking more than what they deem is necessary. AND we already have name recognition in our community!

Michelle has been a God send - she has spent tons of her own money on this new venture and is passionate about helping those in the community. She always has a smile on her face and keeps track of what others needs are and vigorously searches out good deals so she can provide those who come to her with anything they might need. We are truly grateful to have her on our team!

Interested in The Angel Closet? We provide personal hygiene products every Wednesday and we are open on Wednesdays, although we are still working on getting a more permanent schedule set up! The next Angel Closet this month will be October 7th and the 28th, with our Food Giveaway occurring on October 21st.

If you'd like to donate items to our Angel Closet, we'd love to have them! Currently we are accepting winter wear - coats, boots, snow pants/snowsuits, hats, gloves, etc. for adults and children. We are always accepting donations that have no rips or tears and are clean. If you would like to set up an appointment and drop items off, you can call The South Flint Soup Kitchen at (810) 239-3427 or email southflintsoupkitchen@gmail.com ATTN: Michelle.

Life groups question & notes

He went a little farther on, threw himself face downward on the ground, and prayed, "My Father, if it is possible, take this cup of suffering from me! Yet not what I want, but what you want."

Matthew 26:39 (GNT)

NOTES FROM WORSHIP

QUESTIONS FOR LIFE GROUPS

1. Read Matthew 26:36-46. Have you ever faced something that you dreaded and prayed that God would somehow keep it from happening? Share your experience with your group. What happened? Were you able to turn the situation over to God? Why or why not?
2. Read the article in this week's Circuit Rider, Acceptance. Share an experience where you had to accept something that you didn't want to accept. How did you feel after coming to a point of acceptance? Relief? What happened next?
3. How can the members of your group help you this week and on-going to help you to be more receptive to hearing and understanding the Word of God? Pray for each other to have the Holy Spirit bless you with more courage.

In testimony before a congressional committee last month, the Director of the FBI testified that, according to evidence, white supremacist groups make up the majority of domestic terrorism threats. It was only a year ago that the Department of Homeland Security publicly admitted that white supremacist groups within the United States represent a threat to national security at all. Why is it so hard for our leaders to recognize that prejudice against people of color continues to plague our nation?

The circus that organizers labeled as a presidential debate only helped clarify that our country gave enormous power and energy to this unholy position that skin color somehow qualifies privilege. It may be 1932 all over again. If so, perhaps 2021 can begin in similar ways to 1933 with a renewed energy, a coming together of differences, and a new deal.

It's no wonder that any of us who watch the news daily are stressed out. It is hard to find Peace in such an anxious world. It's hard, but not impossible. While knowing that we aren't the only people who feel stressed may not bring the Peace we hope for, we can learn from others.

It was a time of high anxiety. After Jesus was arrested, Peter hung out near the place where Jesus was being interrogated. But to hide his identity and avoid arrest himself, he claimed not to know Jesus. Three days after they executed Jesus, and He was placed in a nearby tomb, the body was missing. A couple of the women claimed that they saw Jesus, and He spoke to them.

Worry, fear, doubt, and the kind of anxiety that you can feel in the pit of your stomach were common among all of those who had come to know Jesus in person. They were together, perhaps trying to comfort each other. Possibly trying to develop a plan for "what now" that might help them both cope and go forward into an uncertain future.

Suddenly the Lord himself stood among them and said to them, "Peace be with you" (Luke 24:36).

Where the Spirit of the Lord is present, there is freedom.

2 Corinthians 3:17

How many of us, when we share our circumstances with a friend or family member, say something much the same as Jesus said to His friends? Phrases, such as, this too will pass — Hang in there — we'll all get through this — I know how you feel — You think that's bad, I (fill in the blanks). And how many of us, after hearing assurances like these, think to ourselves, "You don't understand."

But the words of Jesus are different. While we might say these same words — when they come from the God who created everything — they have more power — more impact — or at least they can.

Perhaps if we were there with the others that day when Jesus showed up in the flesh — even though a few days earlier He was dead and placed in a tomb for His body to decay — here He is in the flesh.

Perhaps then our anxiety would subside, and "Peace be with you" would take on a much more powerful meaning. Perhaps. We humans are a complicated, hot-mess when we are anxious. Words often fall short of what we need to change our perspective.

There is a saying found in the Book of Proverbs that tells us to "Trust in the Lord with all your heart. Never rely on what you think you know" (Proverbs 3:5). And most of us think we know a lot when it comes to imagining the worst-case scenario — the things that can go wrong — and my favorite, the intentions of others.

It's a lot to take in. But Peace be with you comes with this qualifier. Peace is ours only when we trust the One who can offer Peace.
