Proof (God exists!)

Scientists worldwide, since the 17th century, use a formal process for objectively establishing facts through testing and experimentation. There are seven steps, with some steps repeated, depending on circumstances. The process includes question, observation, hypothesis, prediction, experimentation, analysis and communication. This process is called the scientific method.

Fallibility (God's Love Letter?)

This coming Monday is Memorial Day. A holiday, originally created to remember and honor the thousands who died during the Civil War. But as time passed, the remembrance expanded to include all soldiers from all wars.

But memories fade over time. A recent Associated Press article laments,

“Memorial Day is supposed to be about mourning the nation’s fallen service members, but it’s come to anchor the unofficial start of summer and a long weekend of discounts on anything from mattresses to lawn mowers.”

One of the wonderful gifts of science is it explains the world to us. By unraveling the mysterious of the universe, science replaces some of life's uncertainties with certainty. And in doing so, scientific breakthroughs help us live longer, more productive lives. Although consequences can outweigh benefits.

But science, so far, can't explain everything. And a healthy dose of doubt seems appropriate even for what science can explain. In fact, skepticism and doubt play critical roles in science and are an integral part of using the scientific method.

According to Pew Research, around 74% of Americans believe there are some things that science can never explain. And the spiritual world falls into this collection of mysteries that resists mathematical explanation.

83% of us believe people have a soul or spirit besides our physical body. This leaves room for a few of us to believe science can explain how this works, but I'm skeptical whether this knowledge will be helpful.

Science strives to bring certainty while the spiritual world exudes mystery.

Adam Hamilton writes in his book, Wrestling with Doubt, "We want certainty, but God gives us mystery." As a pastor, questions of doubt regularly confronted Hamilton coming from parishioners and sometimes from within.

After all, irrefutable proof of what we believe as Christians does not exist. Neither is there irrefutable proof there is no God.

Hamilton encourages facing doubt head-on. This includes challenging the presuppositions and assumptions we've held up to this point in times. But when all is said and argued, Hamilton explains, "Faith is a decision, a choice, based upon a thoughtful and even critical examination of a particular faith's historical, existential, and spiritual claims."

Hamilton begins his book with the essential question, "Is There a God?" Albert Einstein argues that initially humans created deities out of fear. It was later in human history when humans considered religion as governing morality and human relationships:

The desire for guidance, love, and support prompts men to form the social or moral conception of God. This is the God of Providence, who protects, disposes, rewards, and punishes; the God who, according to the limits of the believer's outlook, loves and cherishes the life of the tribe or of the human race, or even or life itself; the comforter in sorrow and unsatisfied longing; he who preserves the souls of the dead.

While Einstein makes excellent points in his article about the creativity of humans to invent ways to cope with uncertainty, his arguments do not negate the existence of God.

Hamilton offers the creation stories found in Genesis as an illustration of one way science and religion can seem at odds. Arguments arise when the creation stories are read as to how the universe came to exist rather than staying with why it exists.

Upcoming Worship Series "Doubt"

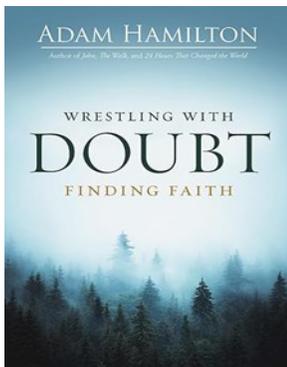

Beginning the Sunday after Mother's Day we begin a new series titled Doubt. Our series is based, in large part, on Adam Hamilton's book with doubt in the title.

Most of us have some doubt about what we claim to believe. Even if we don't verbalize our doubt, we express it in our decisions and actions. We say we have faith, yet we're anxious from worry. We say we trust God, and then go to great lengths to show distrust.

Doubt is part of the human condition.

Book Club News

Our companion book for our new worship series, beginning on the Sunday after Mother's Day, is Adam Hamilton's

Wrestling with Doubt, Finding Faith.

Amazon's website describes his book this way:

Everyone has doubts. Where is God when bad things happen? Does God hear our prayers? Is there a heaven? How can we know? Often, we treat such questions as the enemy of faith. But uncertainty does not mean our belief is lacking. Doubt can be a path to a deeper, richer encounter with God.

In Wrestling with Doubt, Finding Faith, join best-selling author and pastor Adam Hamilton as he discusses some of our most significant sources of doubt and shows how a steady trust in God can emerge from them.

We have a limited number of copies of Adam Hamilton's book. But copies are available through most book retailers and libraries. The price on Amazon as of the publication of this article is $13.49 for paperback and $9.99 for the Kindle edition.

Upcoming Worship Series — “Doubt” ..

“We want certainty, but God gives us mystery,” writes Adam Hamilton in our companion book for this series, titled Wrestling with Doubt, Finding Faith (see Book Club News). Hamilton argues doubt is both natural and healthy. As long as our doubt is motivated further reflection and a search for truth.

Here is the outline if you want to read the chapters from our companion book as we progress through our series:

May 19	Is there a God?	Chapters Intro-1
May 26	The Good Book?	Chapter 2
June 2	Are all non-Christians going to hell?	Chapter 3
June 9	Is Heaven real?	Chapter 4
June 16	When prayers go unanswered	Chapter 5
June 23	Why do the innocent suffer?	Chapter 6

The heavens tell about the glory of God. The skies show that his hands created them. Day after day they speak about it.
Night after night they make it known.

Psalm 19:1-2

“Feed Flint”

“Feed Flint”

A meal goes a long way for a senior living alone, a family struggling to make ends meet, or a child fearful of empty shelves at home. But for the residents of Flint who carry the effects of lead-tainted water, nutrition is critical. Feed Flint provides locally grown, chemical-free, fresh produce to residents living in and around Flint. And we're hoping that you can help us provide 10,000 meals this summer.

Feed Flint includes takeout meals, produce boxes with recipes, and home deliveries as part of our work to guide and support families in moving to sustainable abundance. The reality is that Michigan's food insecurity levels got worse during the COVID-19 pandemic, and this summer's recovery is leaving behind those at the most risk of having to miss meals.

Flint families continue to struggle with the ongoing effects of the water crisis.

We're bringing together the resources of the Asbury Community Development Corporation. This includes Asbury Farms, the South Flint Soup Kitchen, the Asbury Community Help Center, multiple food pantries, and our Sizzling Culture Mobile Food Trailer. Our plan is to care for our neighbors when they need it most. We accept all people as they are, and our doors are always open to anyone.

Asbury Farms provides locally grown produce used to create fabulous and nutritious meals. Our seed-to-table approach is community-based. This not only helps families make it through emergencies and crises. We help move families towards sustainable abundance.

Our Sizzling Culture program provides jobs and new skills to our city's youth. This includes year-round employment. Our staff and most of our volunteers come from the neighborhoods we support. We call this sustainable abundance because families move from need-based on scarcity to enough based on community-generated abundance.

Our work is also about food and justice. Our vision is a revitalized community where every resident can use their talents and passions for the common good, where children grow into active citizens. And all residents can enjoy safety, good health, and a culture that fosters life-long learning and satisfying lives. This summer, help us address food insecurity and strengthen Flint's budding local food system by supporting the Feed Flint campaign. Thank you for taking the time to see what we're doing and considering how you can help.

LIFE GROUP QUESTIONS & MORE:

What the Lord requires of us is to do what is just, to show constant love, and to live in humble fellowship with God.

Micah 6:6-8

NOTES FROM WORSHIP

QUESTIONS FOR LIFE GROUPS:

1. Read Micah 6:6-8. Are you familiar with this text? What does it mean for you? How does this text compare with Jesus teaching that loving God and neighbor are the most important commandments?
2. Read this week's articles titled Fallibility. What does it mean to you that scripture is the Word of God? If scripture is infallible and inerrant why has Christianity gotten it so wrong at times? What can you do to help us get it right?
3. How can the members of your group help you this week and on-going to help you to be more receptive to hearing and understanding the Word of God? Pray for each other to have the Holy Spirit bless you with more courage.

Thousands die unnecessarily in wars. Leading up to the Civil War, the institution of slavery divided our country over a notion that had its roots in economics, but was justified and maintained through physical and emotional violence. The violence included and was justified by the misappropriation of scripture.

How did so many Christians get it so wrong? Slavery was never God's plan!

A 2015 Pew Research report created a stir among many churchgoers by daring to say out loud what was only whispered in meeting rooms and during coffee hours. People were finding other things to do on Sunday mornings. Church attendance membership was in a free fall.

The number of U.S. adults self-identifying as Christian dropped by eight percent in seven years. Meanwhile, the number who self-identify as atheist, agnostic or "nothing in particular," increased six percent. Despite the lyrics to a well-known song that touts love as differentiating Christians from others. A more accurate differentiator emerged known as hypocrisy in scripture.

The Rev Dr Mark Sandlin, in an article published by the United Methodist Insight the year the study was released, argues that hypocrisy is a symptom of a more serious disease plaguing the Christian community. A disease that promotes claiming righteousness for ourselves while condemning others.

The problem, notes Sandlin, the Church developed "a highly sophisticated system that allows it both to quote the Bible and believe whatever it wants, without regard to the scripture itself."

Adam Hamilton, in chapter two of our companion book for this series, illuminates several examples where large numbers of churchgoers and clergy used scripture to justify behavior incompatible with love.

Scripture is believed to be the "Word of God" by Christians. But what does this mean? For many, this means the bible is inerrant and infallible.

Hamilton writes, "The word inerrant means without error and is usually taken to mean that the Bible is without error in everything it speaks about. Infallible means unable to fail, to make mistakes, or to be wrong." And Paul is given credit, or blame, for punctuating this claim in a letter credited to him where he states,

"God has breathed life into all Scripture. It is useful for teaching us what is true. It is useful for correcting our mistakes" (2 Timothy 3:16).

Unfortunately, humans are not inerrant and infallible, despite claims to the contrary. And biblical interpretation can be a dangerous place to make such false claims.

John tells us in his gospel that Jesus is Himself, the Word of God.

I'm convinced the problem we struggle with is not because of Jesus. In fact, Jesus was so appealing that He drew people toward Him. Add in His miraculous gift for teaching and it's no wonder His followers increased in numbers daily.

However, a more recent study published by Pew Research found that 8 in 10 Americans believe religion is losing the influence battle. Their survey focused attention on connections between religious beliefs and candidates for president.

The study found that 94% of Americans want a president whose personal life reflects high moral and ethical standards. And around half of us want a president with strong religious beliefs. It's not clear whether either of these ideals actually affects how most of us vote.

After all, if the major problem facing Christianity is our propensity to behave contrary to the scripture we quote for measuring the goodness of others, then this insight doesn't tell us much.

What can Christians do to help reverse this trend?

One approach, suggested by a small number, is to make Christianity our national religion. And force people to worship God or else. Fortunately, this is only a small number since it seems inconsistent with the way of Jesus.

One of my favorite lines comes from a 2010 episode of Big Bang Theory, when Amy Farrah Fowler says, "I don't object to the concept of a deity, but I'm baffled by the notion of one that takes attendance." So does God take attendance?

In his article, Rev Sandin pondered whether Jesus was talking to church goers and leaders through those leaving the church. And he advised listening to the reasons they list for leaving church.

On the other hand, Jesus spoke plainly about what's important. Jesus says that it all boils down to loving God and loving others.

The Prophet Micah said it this way when answering the question, "What does God want from us?" Do what is just, love everyone and live in humble connection with God.

Perhaps this is why nearly all of us expect those who hold office to hold themselves to high moral and ethical standards. We know that these are about the chaos going on when they are not being watched.

Science is much better equipped to uncover how than why. Theology addresses why. Moreover, science has yet to defensibly address how the universe was created.

One theory of how is known as the “Big Bang” theory. This theory is credited to a theoretical physicist and priest named Georges Lemaitre, who proposed the concept of a “primeval atom.” This initial building block supposedly held all the energy and matter that would become the universe as we now know it.

O Lord, our Lord, your greatness is seen in all the world!

Psalm 8:9

This is my favorite theory of creation. Both because of the long running series by the same name and because it helps me to visualize what it may have been like when God first sang the universe into existence.

It’s estimated that it would take over 93 light years to cross the universe from one side to the other. And the universe continues to expand.

But it all started somewhere. I believe God was there was before it all started. And this is a mystery defying both the scientific method and art.
