Promises (Let's connect)

The Christmas Season comes at a good time. As we approach the shortest day of the year and temperatures stay near or below freezing for days at a time, the Christmas spirit reminds us that there is joy in the world.

This reminder does not affect everyone the same way, which is one reason there are so many versions of Hallmark Christmas movies.

Investing (Using our talents)

We are facing an imminent crisis regarding the health of our planet and our prodigy's well-being. Experts predict that global warming will cause consequential and likely irreversible damage by 2030 if drastic emissions reductions are not implemented to limit warming to 1.5° Celsius above preindustrial levels.

I'm betting that the majority of U.S. voters ignore this warning. A few refuse to believe what science tells them. Others take the word of a rather dim-witted reality TV host over the advice of experts who actually know what they're talking about. And for others, doing something about climate change is too inconvenient.

Some of us, the lucky ones, can get into the spirit and feel the joy of Christmas from Thanksgiving through Christmas Day.

Some fall on the opposite side of the emotional scale, dreading a holiday filled with feelings of loneliness and despair.

Most of us likely fall somewhere in between, with each year being different from the last. And with some welcomed changes and a few differences, we would rather not happen.

I suspect a lot depends on how connected we feel. Are we surrounded by family and friends? Are we regularly with others with whom we feel emotionally connected?

In an article for Psychology Today, Dr. Dianne Grande explains that emotional connections are based on three critical questions. The first question is, "Are you accessible to me?" In other words, am I important enough to you to get your attention when I need it?

And when I do get your attention, are you responsive to me? When I'm anxious, sad, lonely, or afraid, will you comfort me? Last, and perhaps most important, are we engaged in each other's lives enough that you seem to know what brings me comfort and joy when I'm afraid or feel hurt?

The more connected we feel to others, the more likely the Christmas Season brings us joy as we look forward to celebrating the holidays.

An often-used expression among Christians is the phrase, "Jesus is the reason for the season." While the clever rhyme and meaning-packed implication help these words to easily roll off the tongue, what this means for each of us also varies.

The expression has both historical and practical limits. Historically, Christians co-opted a secular holiday celebrating the winter solstice. Practically, giving and receiving gifts with persons we're emotionally connected to grabs much more of our attention than the birth of Jesus. After all, Jesus may not have actually been born on December 24.

How we live out this expression, however, has a lot to do with our emotional connection with Jesus. That is, how does our connection with Jesus answer the three questions posed by Dr. Grande?

Jesus often quoted from the Book of Isaiah, and the prophecies contained in it tell us a lot about God's promise of a Messiah. Among the most significant is the first of four poems, known as the Songs or Poems of the Servant. Throughout the centuries, the church has claimed this text as one of the many prophecies pointing to Jesus Christ as the long-awaited Messiah.

The poems were likely written for a fractured community. The community, with one part living in style along the banks of the Euphrates River, although held in Babylonian exile. The others were still living in the neighborhood and were struggling just to scratch out a meager living.

Those who were taken away by the Babylonians and no longer part of the neighborhood managed quite well. Despite their captivity, they were free to pursue a reasonable living and, for the most part, to come and go as they pleased.

Upcoming Worship Series "Life"

On the Sunday before we celebrate everything scary for Halloween, we begin a new series titled Life. Speaking of everything scary. The debate is long over, and the consensus is that climate change is real and taking an increasing toll on our lives together. The time for Christians to be a part of the solution is long overdue.

One other scary note is that the election is coming up fast. While climate change may not be visible on the ballot, as voters, we need to know where the candidates stand on this issue and what they plan to do about it. We owe this to ourselves and to future generations.

Book Club News

We finish our current worship series, Life, on Sunday, November 24. We used Following Jesus in a Warming World by Kyle Meyaard-

Schaap for this series as our companion book.

We're trying something a little different in preparation for Christmas this year. Instead of chapters to read in preparation for Sunday's message, we'll have a short reflection to read each day.

Daring to Connect is a daily devotional for the four weeks of Advent. Each day, we'll read a reflection that explores faith through daring stories of risk, birth, and radical trust. Dr. Week's stories can help revitalize our connection to faith, community, and personal transformation.

The Season of Advent offers opportunities each year to consider the stories we know as part of our faith: stories of risk, birth, and trying again. Moreover, these are stories of mutual, radical trust between God and God's people, trust manifested by God sending Jesus to live among us.

In Daring to Connect, we will read contemporary versions of similar stories experienced by members of Pastor Dawn Darwin Weaks' congregation. A church totally focused on

Upcoming Worship Series — “Life”

Our next series looks at our changing climate, assisted by a book written by a fellow Michigander, Kyle Meyaard-Schaap. Following Jesus in a Warming World will be the companion book for our new worship series beginning on Sunday, October 27th. We will spend the weeks leading up to Advent looking at what Scripture says about our role in caring for our planet.

Then the Lord God placed the man in the Garden of Eden to cultivate it and guard it.

Genesis 2:16

Millions of Christians took a stance they claimed to be pro-life. Honestly, while their position is understandable, the focus was more on decisions that shouldn't be theirs to make. More important, climate change is taking away life. Taking action to care for our planet is a pro-life position.

Here is the outline of our series and each week's reading assignment if you want to read our companion book as we progress through our series:

Title	Sunday	Scripture	Reading
Neighbors	October 27	Luke 10:25-37	Intro & Ch 1
A Love Story	November 3	John 1:1-18	Ch's 2 & 3

“Feed Flint”

A meal goes a long way for a senior living alone, a family struggling to make ends meet, or a child fearful of empty shelves at home. But for the residents of Flint who carry the effects of lead-tainted water, nutrition is critical. Feed Flint provides locally grown, chemical-free, fresh produce to residents living in and around Flint. And we're hoping that you can help us provide 10,000 meals this summer.

Feed Flint includes takeout meals, produce boxes with recipes, and home deliveries as part of our work to guide and support families in moving to sustainable abundance. The reality is that Michigan's food insecurity levels got worse during the COVID-19 pandemic, and this summer's recovery is leaving behind those at the most risk of having to miss meals.

Flint families continue to struggle with the ongoing effects of the water crisis.

We're bringing together the resources of the Asbury Community Development Corporation. This includes Asbury Farms, the South Flint Soup Kitchen, the Asbury Community Help Center, multiple food pantries, and our Sizzling Culture Mobile Food Trailer. Our plan is to care for our neighbors when they need it most. We accept all people as they are, and our doors are always open to anyone.

Asbury Farms provides locally grown produce used to create fabulous and nutritious meals. Our seed-to-table approach is community-based. This not only helps families make it through emergencies and crises. We help move families towards sustainable abundance.

Our Sizzling Culture program provides jobs and new skills to our city's youth. This includes year-round employment. Our staff and most of our volunteers come from the neighborhoods we support. We call this sustainable abundance because families move from need-based on scarcity to enough based on community-generated abundance.

Our work is also about food and justice. Our vision is a revitalized community where every resident can use their talents and passions for the common good, where children grow into active citizens. And all residents can enjoy safety, good health, and a culture that fosters life-long learning and satisfying lives. This summer, help us address food insecurity and strengthen Flint's budding local food system by supporting the Feed Flint campaign. Thank you for taking the time to see what we're doing and considering how you can help.

Isaiah 42:1:9

NOTES FROM WORSHIP

QUESTIONS FOR LIFE GROUPS:

1. Read Isaiah 42:1:9. What images come to mind as you read this text?
2. Read this week’s article titled Promises. With whom are you emotionally connected? How do these connections compare with your connection to Jesus Christ? What are some ways that you can strengthen your connection with Christ during this Advent Season?
3. How can the members of your group help you be more receptive to hearing and understanding the Word of God this week? Pray for each other to have the Holy Spirit bless you with more courage.

personal transformation through mission in their community. Beginning with the first Sunday of Advent, each day's devotion includes an Advent scripture, reflection, and prayer. Candle-lighting moments for each Sunday and Christmas make Daring to Connect an engaging Advent experience.

Rev. Dr. Dawn Darwin Weaks received her B.A. from Baylor University, her M. Div. from Brite Divinity School at Texas Christian University, and her D. Min. from St. Paul School of Theology. Initially ordained in the Southern Baptist Church where she served as an associate minister, Pastor Weaks answered a call to become a Disciples of Christ minister in 1999. She is now the co-pastor of Connection Christian Church in Odessa, Texas, with her husband, Rev. Dr. Joe Weaks.

A frequent speaker at events nationwide, she has her writing published in various venues. Her three passions are her family, her relationship with God, and helping others hear and live out the calling God gives them.

Pastor Weaks offers this insight in her introduction:

Sometimes the weight of the world can bog us down. Everything can feel so heavy, it's hard to move. Yet Advent, this season of waiting for the coming of Christ anew, is meant to be an adventure. It's right there in the word! Within the pages of this devotional are stories of playfulness, courage, trying again, laughter, and radical trust- from God and us. After all, our story as Christians centers on God's outrageous risk of sending Jesus to us in the first place.

We'll have a few books available for purchase, but copies are available through most book retailers and libraries. As of the publication of this article, the price on Amazon for a new paperback edition is $4.99, and the Kindle version is also $4.99.

Our Book Club does not meet as a group. However, our weekly messages reference that week's chapters. You can anticipate spoiler alerts unless you keep up with the pace. You can purchase your own copy or visit your local library.

You can contact our office with questions by phone or simply type your question or enter a prayer request on our website's homepage — FlintAsburyChurch.org.

The World Meteorological Organization's report on the state of our climate for 2024 reported that greenhouse gases reached record levels in 2023 and continue to rise so far this year. They anticipate 2023 and 2024 will be the two warmest years on record. And 2024 is on track to be the warmest in history. Note that the past 10 years have been the warmest ten years in the 175-year observational record.

Some skeptics wonder why warmer isn't better, particularly as temperatures drop here in Michigan as winter approaches and winter sports don't move their needle.

First, while our needs, wants, and desires are important, humans habitually make choices that aren't consistent with satisfying even ourselves. We choose the short term with bad information, reducing our joy without realizing why we're not satisfied. And we guard our bad choices as though we don't have a choice. But we do have a choice.

Second, we organize into neighborhoods, churches, cities, and so on because we recognize that working together gives us a better chance of meeting our needs, wants, and desires.

This notion is validated by experience and encouraged in scripture. Humanity long ago realized that survival, comfort, and progress result from cooperation more than conflict.

In our companion book this week, we read about vocation and advocacy. While we may vaguely agree on what it means to have a vocation, Kyle Meygaard-Schaap, author of Following Jesus in a Warming World, turns to Christian pastor and author Frederick Buechner, who describes your vocation as that place "where your deep gladness and the world's deep hunger meet."

While poetically inspiring, more clarity is needed before we connect our individual roles in a warming world.

For some, vocation is obvious, and it's easy to see that many individuals are engaged in activities that suit them. Numerous contributors who discovered new ways to address survival, comfort, and progress made the Industrial Revolution possible. Discoveries utilizing fossil fuels, in particular, contributed substantially to meeting the needs, wants, and desires of everyone on the planet. This contribution was significant enough that we find a direct correlation between national wealth and consumption of fossil fuels.

So why isn't a plan to substantially increase exploration the right one for the United States?

This plan, touted by our incoming administration, will financially benefit a very small number of already wealthy individuals in the short run. But it will be disastrous for all of us in the next few decades.

The good news is that cleaner energy sources are available. The challenge is to apply our talents to meet our needs, wants, and desires and greatly reduce greenhouse gas emissions. This is where advocacy comes in.

The obstacles we face are systemic. Fossil fuels impact every facet of life, from how we grow food to what we choose to eat to how we get to the store to buy groceries. Addressing them will require strong, visionary leaders, investment and new legislative. Fortunately, the U.S. is still a democracy, giving each of us a voice and vote.

Meanwhile, those living in the neighborhood struggled in the aftermath of the war. Vandals had plundered the land, the residence little to work with. The neighborhood was devastated economically and spiritually.

It was as though God had abandoned them altogether, or at least it seemed that there were other gods in control of their destiny with more power and influence than the God that they had known as children.

This description should also sound familiar. Scripture is unique in its relevance to all generations. Whenever we feel disconnected from the familiar, disoriented by our surroundings, and devastated by struggles, we hope for good news.

Here is my servant... He will not lose hope or control. He will establish justice on the earth.

Isaiah 42-1:9

Advent can be a time of reflecting on the good news of Jesus Christ. We need only allow the Spirit of God to work in our imagination and hearts.

This Sunday begins the Season of Advent. The subtitle of our companion book for our Advent Series suggests that we can approach Advent as an adventure. One way to do this is to work on our emotional connection with Jesus. Pastor Dawn Darwin Weak's book of daily devotions can help by helping us spend a few minutes each day practicing the expression, "Jesus is the reason for the season."

Advent reminds us of God's promise that suffering never has the last word. In the days leading up to Christmas Eve, suspense builds both by the wrapped gifts under trees to be revealed when Christmas arrives and by allowing ourselves to remember the greatest gift of all, which began in stark conditions among livestock. Jesus spent His first night sleeping in a feeding trough as the world waited in anticipation of being fed.

Whether you choose to read Pastor Dawn's book of devotions, The Upper Room, or some other collection, spend a little time each day connecting or reconnecting with Jesus Christ during Advent this year. Perhaps you'll arrange five candles, lighting one as the first week begins as you begin your time of connecting. Light the same one again as the second week begins and add one more. By Christmas Eve, you will be ready to light the last candle and spend quiet time in the glow of all five candles.

Pastor Dawn offers a short devotion just for this purpose, and there are plenty of free options available online.

Advent is an adventure for all who open their hearts to connecting with our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Advocacy involves using our collective voices to remind legislators that they work for us. We hired them with our vote, and we can fire them in the next election if they don't listen.

Our companion book describes an effective process for communicating with legislatures at the local and federal levels. In addition, Schaap offers a tutorial on advocating through writing and social media posting.

Each of us is uniquely gifted to advocate for positive change. As Christians, we're called to utilize our gifts for the common good.

Matthew tells us about a story Jesus told that is frequently connected to vocation. Like other stories told by Jesus, this one brilliantly uses metaphors, allegory, and insight. This particular story is traditionally known as the Parable of the Talents.

"Well done! Said his master.
"Come on in and share my happiness!"

Matthew 25-21

While a talent, at the time Jesus told the story, was a particular amount of money, the homophone "talent" also means a capability, such as public speaking, singing, carving, cooking, and connecting. The parable describes God's expectation for utilizing the unique giftedness we each receive.

Granted, it seems like some of us are more gifted than others. The point is we're to use whatever we have to help each other without harming the planet we're expected to care for.

"There was a wealthy person," begins Jesus, "who left His servants in charge of His wealth while He was away. When He returned, He anticipated that each would invest whatever they were given in charge of, thus multiplying His wealth. Two of them did as expected, while one chose to bury what his Master gave him to invest rather than risk losing it."

"Good job," said the Master to the two who invested. "Terrible job," said the Master to the one who chose to bury His wealth."

God gives each of us capacities, gifts, and resources to make the world better. We're faithful when we invest whatever we're given in doing the vocation we're gifted for.

As we approach the end of our series, Life, we are left with the question: What is your role in following Jesus in a warming world?
